FRYEBURG FLIVER

AT HOME, ABROAD, OR OVER THE RIVER,
THERE'S NOTHING EQUALS THE FRYEBURG FLIVER.

Editorial

The Fryeburg road crews have been hard at work on the village streets. The street on which the Fliver Plant is located, which has been impossible all summer, is impassible now.

The other streets have good hard road beds (especially hard on horses and automobile springs) and although the going is pretty rough, the road commissioners will try and smooth things over before town-meeting day.

The many Fryeburgers who attended the hotel Randall fire at North Conway, could not help being favorably impressed by the efficiency of the Conway fire brigade.

The "pumper" from Conway Cor. performed "yeoman" service in checking the flames and in saving the adjoining buildings, while the "volunteer" fire fighters gave one the impression of being an organized body of men, who knew what they were about.

But what if they had summoned aid from this busy town? No doubt, they would have responded, noble without doubt, but to what avail? They could have "tooted" loudly on the new five hundred dollar "whistle," but that comprises the sum total of our modern equipment.

In summing up our fire protection we find that although we have a Village Fire Corporation, whose avowed purpose is to afford fire protection, that our assets are: a new and beautifully toned "siren," but no alarm system by which we can tell in which direction assistance is needed; a fire chief (hardly any one knows who he is, but we suppose he is Judge Mason or Frank Peterson or Noah McDonald or some one else) with absolutely no organized body of fire fighters; and we have an ancient hose reel and a hydrant system with a very uncertain gravity pressure.

That, gentle reader, is the extent of our fire protection. We can feel justly proud of our school system, which is second to none. We have beautiful sidewalks and well kept streets. Should we not offer a prayer, at least, for our fire department.

Loony Lim-ricks

A fellow sat down at the table
And ate everything he was able.
That night, in a dream,
He dreamed: "A nightmare."

Mustn't mistook my friends for a stable.
There was a young man from Fryeburg
Who had not a word for a friend.

Till his Ma, with a thimble
And finger quills, he'd Proceeded, this lady was to mind.

There was an old 2-cent from the Harbor.
Who seldom stepped in to the harbor.
His beard grew, luxuriant,
But what seemed most curious,
The squirrels used it, for an arbor.

When November days are dreary,
And the sun seems out of style,
Your sweet face with a smile, cheerly,
If you spare to pack a smile.

How lonely is our Fredrick
As he hears the wedding chimes.
And Maudie dear, I greatly fear,
Will sail for somewhere else.

They've lost their chance for good and all,
Yes, Fredrick, Maudie and Bessie,
And how they sob and sigh—too late,
Because they didn't wait.

HEBRON

Beauce Neighborhood
Harry Beauce Has Hand Mangled in Saw—Ralph Wheeler Able to Move—Roads in Bad Shape Since the Rain.

Miss Mary Drake, the teacher here, and Miss Julia Bryant of Hartford spent the week end in Lewiston.

Harry Beauce met with a bad accident at his mill, Friday. He was sawing up slabs and in some way, he does not know how, his right hand was caught and dreadfully mangled. The forefinger was torn completely off, the two middle fingers badly crushed, also the thumb. Earl Gurney, who happened to be at the mill, took Mr. Beauce to Mechanic Falls as quickly as possible, where Dr. Rankin administered ether and dressed the wound. Mr. Beauce was in a good deal of pain for a few days, but is feeling quite a lot better at this time, Monday. He hopes to save the two middle fingers, but is not certain yet.

Ralph Wheeler, who had rheumatic fever last summer, and has been confined to his bed ever since, unable to move himself until lately, has so far recovered that he walked across the room to the couch, with assistance, last week. He can now move his arms around, but cannot use his hands or straighten his fingers, but he hopes before long to be able to use them. His friends are much pleased at his recovery and hope before long to see him out once more.

Everyone who could, went to the town house, Monday, to vote against Daylight Saving time.

The rains of last week and the warmer weather have made the traveling very bad in this vicinity.

There is no better evidence of a commendable community spirit than that of a town in which a person lives. If a town is worth living in it is worth defending and supporting in its efforts to advance with the rest of the world.

 John Gray were in Norway, Thunberg
 Reginald, son of the late Harvey has visited relatives here.
 Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harriman
 Thunberg with relatives at West-and their little son, Edward, had his limbs removed while away.
 Mrs. Lillian Goss visited her brother and his family at Windham, recently.
 Mr. and Mrs. John Gray were in at Frank Watson's a day recently.
 Mrs. H. H. Hane, of the Hane fam-burg Village were guests of his parents
 Sunday.
 All were glad to see the son, Stephen,
 and more; the snow has all but the mud stays on.
 School will close this week until Christmas.
